It includes a 3D modeling package, a cloud-based rendering package, and several capabilities for advanced design review and simulation. Product design has always been more than just creating an ideal design with the best function, performance, and aesthetics. But the integration of cutting-edge technologies has made design more comprehensive and user-friendly in today's world. These same technologies are key to a successful launch of products. Hence, increasing use of these technologies for product design is essential in the success of the launch. The design team needs to work together with the marketing and sales teams to ensure that the product has suitable specifications to ensure market acceptance. Autodesk Product Design Suite helps the product design team in a number of ways: 1. Sketching: Sketching allows the design team to create a complete design in one interactive flow, which can later be executed in the cloud. 2. Visualization: The design team can visualize their design in real time with the most up-to-date cloud-based rendering technology. 3. Simulation: Simulation helps the design team to evaluate the product in the real-world environment and test it in the virtual environment. The team can use real-time simulation data to modify the design to achieve a better product design. 4. Data Management: Autodesk Product Design Suite 2020 has inbuilt data management tools for storage, archiving, and retrieval of all product-related data such as files, 3D models, and documents. 5. Simulation: Autodesk product design suite allows the design team to test the product in a realistic environment, before it is released into the market. With the integrated simulation technology, the team can test the product in a variety of conditions with multiple users, and check its performance under various conditions. \[tab:autodesk-design-suit-2020\]
